A close-up photograph of several weathered wooden planks. The planks are arranged in a slightly overlapping, parallel fashion, running diagonally from the top-left towards the bottom-right. The wood has a natural, aged appearance with a mix of light tan and greyish-brown tones. The grain is clearly visible, showing fine, parallel lines. There are several small, dark knots and imperfections scattered across the surface, particularly on the left side. The lighting is even, highlighting the texture and grain of the wood. The overall composition is simple and focuses on the natural beauty and texture of the material.
